

TEA TENT TALES: an Invitation

You've completed the first two loops and there's a massive queue at the next target after tea: a 75yd elephant. That's just the cub peg. You've bought 4 burgers and one each for the others on your target and now you need something to occupy your brain while you wait...

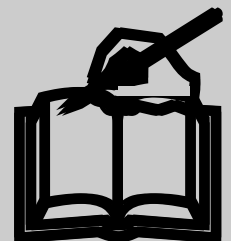

If only there was a story writer in the NFAS. They could send short stories in to the Newsletter so that we could all enjoy the wait for the elephant shot just that little bit more.

Can you write short stories? We have rubbish collectors shooting next to rocket scientists (and they don't even know it) so there must be a fiction demon out there, somewhere.

If you think you can capture the spirit of field archery in fiction, in approximately 1000 to 1250 words, please send a story to the Newsletter!

Editor's address on page 3.

From an idea by Mike Davies

